Abstract

General information and statistics about the Physical Review journals will be presented. I will give a description of the review process and of other activities at the Editorial Office, addressing some questions frequently asked by authors, referees, and others in the scientific community. These questions include how referees are chosen, what stages a manuscript goes through on its way to publication, what can slow down the process, and what authors can do to help make it quicker and smoother. Finally, I will mention some recent and future developments.
